Hi David,

I was at a meeting today with some people from Hydro One and in discussions at the end of meeting in came up you were meeting them tomorrow.

The seem have some good information to share including mapping that shows fairly accurately on Google-earth overlay (which I can manipulate if they provide them to us) their lines and sub-stations. I have asked them to share this with us but would kindly request you re-iterate the request.

They also have information on their land ownership and I would ask if you could seek clarification on whether they own the hydro corridor (between Kitchener and London) or simply have an easement for their lines- I believe it's just an easement.

I also asked them what plans they have to upgrade or add new transmission lines on this stretch- hopefully they will share this with you as they didn't have it to hand. It may be worth exploring what additional land they may required in the future adjacent to a future high speed rail line if we need to acquire land for that purpose.

They also have standards for set backs from rail lines- minimum of 10m I believe and seems to have some knowledge of the ecotrain study.

Thanks
